

The E. Falck Institute is the leading proponent of the Erasmus+ project "DO-RE-MI". In this innovative project the institute has as working partners the Technical Institute of tourism (Istituto Tecnico Commerciale) "C. Darwin" of Rome and other European schools located in Greece, Romania, Cyprus and Portugal.

"DO-RE-MI" promotes the mobility of students with special educational needs throughout Europe and likewise is an inclusive project that allows a social development. Its aim consists in helping the students to overcome the linguistic, cognitive and social difficulties that might affect them by strengthening the physical, expressive and musical skills.

The students that take part to the project develop specific skills and, at the same time, achieve a meaningful life-experience. By visiting, in fact, schools of other countries they can experience the exchange of good-practice and knowledge sharing achieving, thus, significant results on the overall human development.

The project involves the collaboration of all the components of the institute (students, teachers and families) and it is visible in all its implementation stages on the e-Twinning operating system as well as on the different communication means of the school (website, new social media, etc.).

Moreover the project has a useful impact on the school staff which in this way can compare itself with views on teaching methods and pedagogic approaches of social inclusion at an European level.
